

A large map of China is formed by a mosaic of many small, overlapping photographs. The photos depict a wide variety of subjects: natural landscapes like mountains, rivers, and lakes; diverse wildlife including pandas, tigers, and various birds; and scenes of human life and culture. The arrangement of the photos follows the geographical outline of China, with the highest density of images in the eastern and central regions. The overall effect is a colorful and detailed representation of the country's rich natural and cultural heritage.

Message from the President

Dear Nature Explorers,

I am Philip He, President of Sichuan Zhuye International Travel Agency. Since our founding in 2016, my team and I have held a simple yet beautiful aspiration: to show you China's most breathtaking natural landscapes and encounter its most marvelous wildlife.

Over the years, guiding nature enthusiasts from around the world, from the Tibetan Plateau to the eastern coast, we've witnessed countless awe-inspiring miracles of life.

We insist on small groups and in-depth experiences, rejecting superficial tourism. Because we understand what true nature lovers seek: the patience to hear a flower bloom, the willingness to wait for a bird to spread its wings.

We firmly believe that "Travel is an art." We look forward to meeting you in the wild, where together we'll discover the poetry and grandeur of China's nature.

- Birdwatching Expeditions: As China's earliest team (since 2005) collaborating with international conservation organizations, we craft premier birding experiences for global enthusiasts.

- Wildlife Photography Expeditions

Since 2010, we've guided photographers deep into China's wilderness – from Sichuan's Tangjiahe Nature Reserve to Qinghai's Hoh Xil – tracking rare species like golden snub-nosed monkeys and snowleopards.

- Alpine Flora Expeditions: Partnering with botanists, we reveal the extraordinary beauty of China's western alpine flora.
