Kirirom National Park

OVERVIEW

Located a little over 112km from the capital city of Phnom Penh, Kirirom became Cambodia's first officially designated national park. The name Kirirom was given to the area by King Monivong in the 1930s and means 'happy mountain'. The park is located at an altitude of 675m above sea level at the east end of Cardamom Mountains. Numerous walking trails wind through the lush forest and pine groves to waterfalls that are ideal for picnics and relaxing. The adventurous will also enjoy camping and mountain biking.

In 1950 the Kirirom forest was designated a reserve by Royal decree. The coolness and almost alpine air were much loved by the late King Sihanouk, who would travel with his forests and down to picturesque lakes.

Enjoy a priceless view of the Cardamom Mountain range, as the King once did, from the King's former retreat. A pair of traditional Buddhist temples offer the chance to pray and be blessed for good health and prosperity.

WILDLIFE

Kirirom National Park is home to many kinds of wildlife, including some endangered species such as the pleated gibbon and sun bears. Wild elephants and leopards still live in the depths of the park along with deer, gaur, banteng and a diverse selection of birds that will thrill the keenest birdwatcher.

PINE FOREST & NATURE

Most visitors come for the nature and peace to be found in Kirirom National Park. A special kind of pine tree, only found in Cambodia in this national park, lead all the way up the mountain plateau. Wild plants grow abundantly in the park and along the many trails that zigzag through the reserve.

PICTURESQUE WATERFALLS

Best seen in the rainy season or just after, the numerous waterfalls in Kirirom National Park are one of the most attractive sites for visitors. The most beautiful can be found on Chombok where a 40m high cascade falls over a jungle-clad face. As part of a visit.
