WELCOME UNZEN NAGASAKI KYUUSYU

~UNZEN CITY~

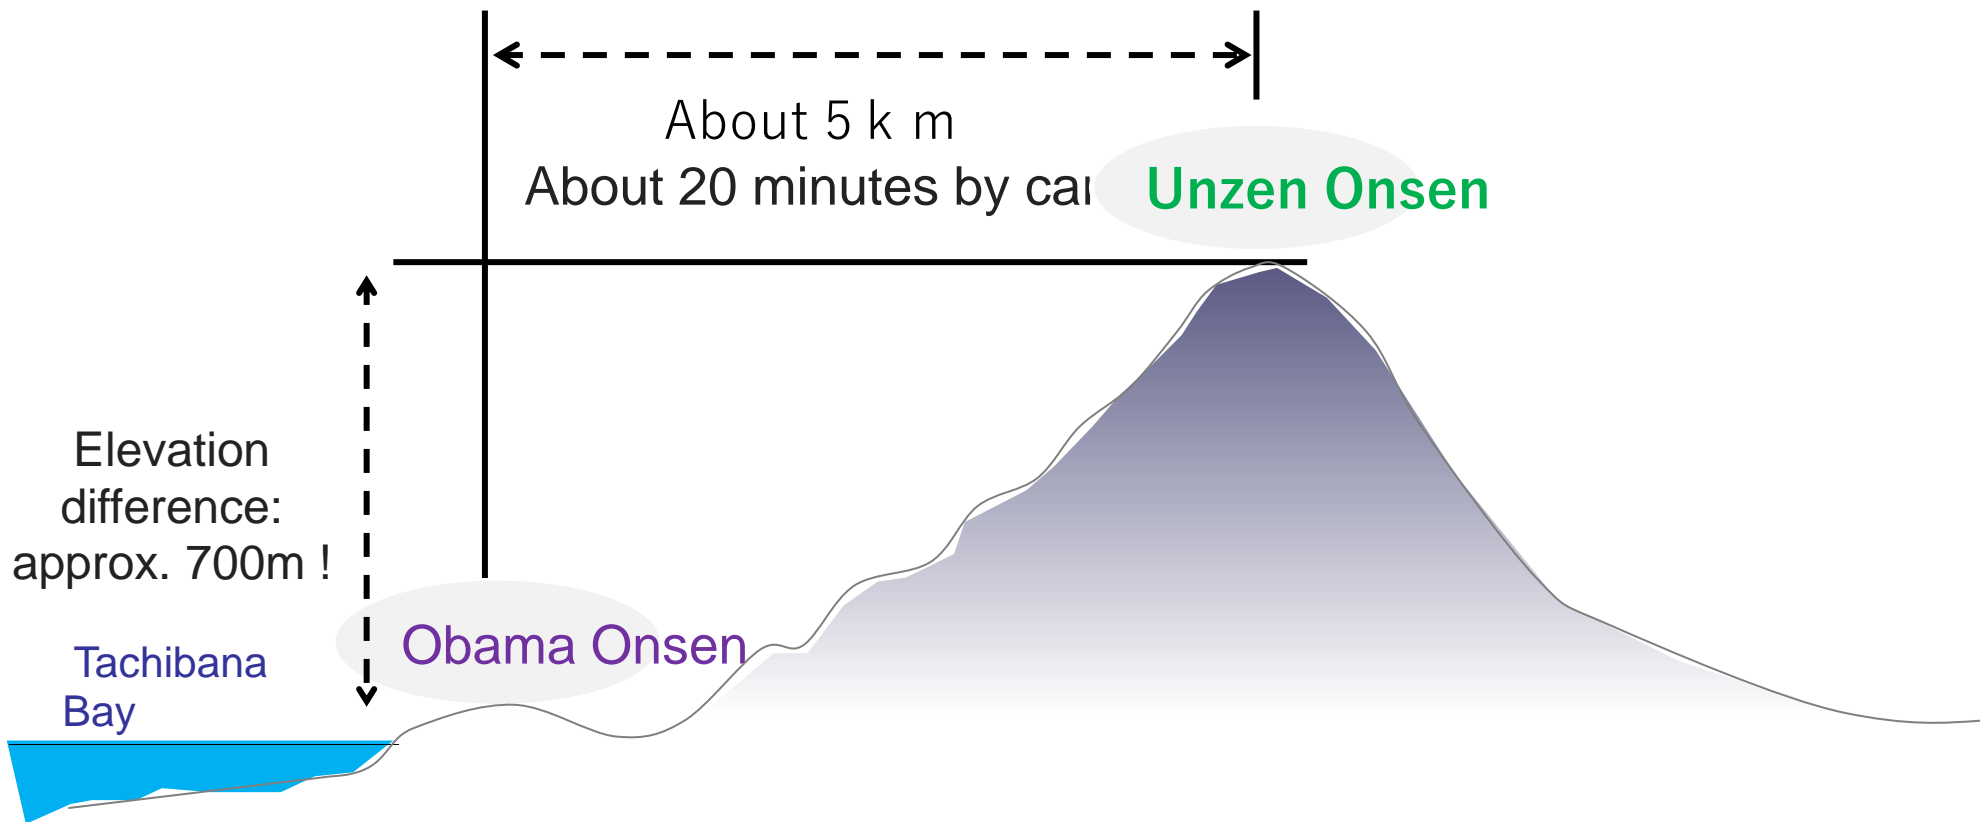

Unzen City is located at the entrance to the Shimabara Peninsula. Boasting magnificent natural environments such as Mount Fugen and Unzen Jigoku, Unzen-Amakusa National Park was designated as Japan's first national park. It is also a hot spring resort with two hot springs, Unzen Onsen and Obama Onsen, each with different spring quality.

It is also one of the prefecture's leading agricultural areas, and along with the abundant seafood caught in the Ariake Sea and Tachibana Bay, the region's rich food supply is one of its characteristics.

HOT SPRING

Unzen Onsen Mountain worship and Old summer resort

Unzen Onsen is a place of faith and healing that spreads across the mountainous region. Unzen Onsen, said to have been discovered over 1,300 years ago, has long been a place of faith and healing. From about 100 years ago, it was a popular summer resort for foreigners, and was designated as Japan's first national park. There are plenty of things to see, including the changing seasons and the hell zone. The sulfur springs are said to be effective against skin diseases. The smell of sulfur wafting through the hot spring town gives you a direct sense of the workings of the earth.

Sunset, Steam, Obama Onsen

The temperature of the spring is 105 degrees. Obama Onsen is one of the top hot springs in Japan in terms of both heat output and temperature. The hot spring town spreads along the coast of Tachibana Bay, where steam rises here and there, and the ocean is dyed crimson red by the setting sun, creating a very emotional scene. Obama Onsen boasts an abundant supply of hot water, and is characterized by its chloride spring water that feels soft on the skin.
