
Dubrovnik & Beyond

Introduction

An aerial, high-angle photograph of a historic city square. A wide, light-colored paved walkway runs diagonally from the top left towards the bottom right. To the right of the walkway is a large, circular, domed structure, possibly a fountain or a well, with a grid-like pattern on its top. Several people are walking along the path and near the domed structure. In the background, there are buildings with arched windows and doorways. The overall scene is brightly lit, suggesting a sunny day.

Whatever you can imagine,
you will find within the walls and

An aerial photograph of a historic city, likely Dubrovnik, showing a large circular stone structure in the foreground and a winding path through the old town.

The moment you first catch the timelessness of Tradition, or a tightly packed center from the center of your tongue, when the Adriatic embraces you in its crystal clarity, or the scent of pine and wild herbs wafts through the air, our thing becomes immediately clear: you will never leave again. And when you do, without Croatia will welcome you home.

Whether you're a lover of history or nature, gentlemen about fishing, motivated by athleticism or simply someone who thrives on movement and discovery. The town and its surrounding landscapes will capture your soul. Whatever your heart seeks, you'll find it here, steeped in centuries of elegance, endurance and vibrant culture.

venture just a few kilometers in any direction and you'll find yourself immersed in a new world - landscapes, customs and traditions that still live strong in a heartbeat. And yet, they are all bound by a single, golden thread: Dubrovnik's timeless, carefully guarded heritage.

The people of Dubrovnik have long held sacred their traditions, their peace and above all, their freedom. Legend has it that the great Roman poet from Constantinople once wrote, "It is a freedom they would not exchange for all the silver, all the gold, or all human lives." That sacred identity endures to this day, visible in everything from the elegant traditional domes of Dubrovnik's Primate's Palace to the old town of Dubrovnik, in the cultural culinary delights once served in the tables of Dubrovnik's aristocracy.

Together, these threads of tradition and openness form the tapestry of a city that has welcomed the world for centuries - a cosmopolitan story that begins with the Republic of Dubrovnik and flourishes today.

Dubrovnik's legendary endurance, warmth, peace and elegance were its first great ambassadors, spreading world of a singular city far beyond the horizon. Though modest in size, Dubrovnik has always stood tall in spirit. It mirrored its surrounding countryside, homestead in ruins and drew enduring strength from hearth, home and the seafaring traditions of its coast – all of which still pulse through the daily life of its people.

And importantly, Dubrovnik never kept its heritage locked away. It shared it with the world – generously, proudly and without hesitation.

Now, it is your turn to step into the story.

Let this brochure be your guide, your invitation, your map. Let it lead you through centuries of living history. Follow its call, to walk, to wander, to choose your own adventure. Hike coastal trails, cycle through sunlit valleys, or simply let the evening unfold over the Elaphiti Islands, as you taste fine local wine and sample dishes shaped by tradition and memory.

Let your spirit rest on the hidden beaches of Dubrovacko Primorje, where the world falls away. Reconnect with nature in Mljet National Park – the oldest marine sanctuary in the Adriatic – or surrender to the tranquil beauty of Lokrum Island, a tropical haven just minutes from the city.

In Tuzna Dubrovacka, you may be welcomed to the table with a steaming bowl of minestra – a rich, rustic dish of cabbage and cured meats – before being invited to join in the spirited steps of a traditional dance. In Konakle, your hosts may uncork a bottle of Malvazija Dubrovacka, the once ceremonial wine of the Republic, offered today as a timeless gesture of hospitality.

Let yourself be drawn in. Feel the rhythm of a lifestyle that has endured across centuries and still pulses with life. Let it speak to your senses, settle into your memory and gently, unmistakably, call you back.

Welcome to Dubrovnik.

Travel information

Arrival

BY PLANE

Dubrovnik Airport is located approximately 20 kilometres from the city. An official airport shuttle is available for every scheduled flight arrival, offering a direct connection to the town. For flight departures from the airport, the shuttle bus leaves from the Main Bus Terminal in Grad, making stops at the Cruise building, in front of the Cable Car Station and in Subtown at the One Suite Hotel.

The full timetable is available via the Platamus Travel Agency website: www.platamus.hr/shuttle-bus

Bus services operate 24 hours a day.

BY CAR

Several private motels are available on the approach to and within Dubrovnik, with some open 24/7.

Parking:

Parking is available throughout Dubrovnik, with larger public car parks located near the Old City and in key areas such as Grad. From these locations, the historic centre is easily reached on foot or by public transport.

Limited street parking is also available outside the restricted traffic zone surrounding the Old City, while access within the zone is limited to residents and authorised vehicles. Visitors are advised to use designated parking areas and follow local signage carefully in order to avoid fines.

A full list of available parking locations can be found below on the page 82.

Driving restrictions around the Historic Old City

The City of Dubrovnik has implemented a special traffic Management System around the historic city centre and the immediate surrounding buffer zone, in order to protect cultural heritage and ensure sustainable urban mobility. Access by vehicle to the zone is therefore restricted and permitted only under specific conditions, as well as during special events or periods of increased traffic. Visitors are strongly encouraged to familiarise themselves with the traffic regulations in order to avoid possible fines, particularly those approaching the Old City with rental vehicles.

The zone includes the entire area surrounding the Old City, stretching from the area of Spina glavnica, along Zagarbicka Street to Vukotića and across the areas of Pile to Bračuvaca. Only vehicles with special approval will be allowed to enter the zone. The zone begins at the traffic lights at the city entrance, near the public garage. From that point on, further vehicle access is limited and clearly regulated, so please take note of where vehicle access restrictions and fines for violations apply. Visitors may enter the zone only if they have arranged access in advance through one of the following:

- The Bus Web Shop – for vehicles with 7+1, 8+1, or 9-30 seats or more, with stopping permitted at the Pile and Ploče drop-off zones.
- Pre-booked parking via the official app at parking lots located below the Dubrovnik Cable Car and at Pile Gate.
- If staying in private accommodation that includes registered garage parking and the host has submitted the vehicle's license plate in advance.
- If staying in a hotel located within the restricted zone, if you are arriving in Dubrovnik with a confirmed booking at a hotel or private accommodation rental, your accommodation provider should secure and confirm a parking place for you in advance, registering your vehicle registration plate number prior to your arrival or within three days of your arrival.

If you are arriving without a prior accommodation reservation and enter the zone by vehicle in search of a place to stay, please be aware that while entry is permitted for that purpose, your stay must still be properly registered in the official system; if you do not find accommodation, you will not be able to register your stay, as official registration requires confirmation from an authorised accommodation provider and you are not entitled to remain with your vehicle within the zone.

If you do find accommodation after entering the zone, your hotel or private accommodation provider is required to register your stay within three days, in line with legal obligations.

if, however, you do not secure accommodation, to avoid a possible fine, you must leave the zone and send an explanation within three days of entering the zone to the following e-mail address: zoonapodubrovnik.hr.

Your message should include your vehicle registration plate number, the date and time of your entry and a short explanation of the circumstances. The City Administration will then assess your case and act accordingly.

We strongly advise all visitors to book accommodation in advance and to confirm with their host whether access to the protected zone and parking arrangements can be secured prior to arrival.

BY BOAT

Dubrovnik maintains excellent ferry and catamaran connections with other Croatian ports and with Bari, Italy. Regular daily boat services also link Dubrovnik with the nearby islands of Makarski, Lopud, Šibenik, and Metković, and seasonally, with Rijeka and Ljubljana.

The main harbour is in Gruš, serving as the hub for all national and international maritime routes. A smaller port, located in the Old City, offers boat lines to Lokrum Island, Mljet, Dubrovnik and Cavtat.

In the Gruš Harbour, travellers will find the ferry ticket office, banks, ATMs, exchange offices, parking, grocery stores, a supermarket, Sed Department Store, the open-air green market, hotels, travel agencies, car rental services, cafes and restaurants and the Dubrovnik Tourist Board Office. The Old City is just 3 kilometres away – a 30-minute walk or a 10-minute ride on local bus lines 1A, 1B, 2 and 8.

DEPARTURES FROM THE OLD CITY PORT

→ Boat to Lokrum Island

The boat to Lokrum Island – a designated special nature reserve – departs every 30 minutes during the peak tourist season from the Old City Port. The ride takes approximately 10 minutes. Tickets are sold at the dockside kiosk beside the boat. The service may be suspended in bad weather.

More info: www.lokrum.hr

→ Boats to Cavtat, Mljet and Šibenik

Throughout the tourist season, regular boat lines operate between Cavtat and the Old City Port, with stops in Mljet and Šibenik. The journey takes around 45 minutes. Service is weather-dependent.

DEPARTURES FROM THE CRUIZ HARBOUR

→ Seats to the Elaphiti Islands

Seats to the Elaphiti Islands (Dolac, Lopud and Brač) depart from the Cruz Harbour. Timetables are available at the Dubrovnik Tourist Board TIC.

A passenger-only ferry operates four times daily, while a car ferry runs once or twice a day depending on the season.

For information: www.jadrolinija.hr

→ Seats to Mljet Island

The island of Mljet is accessible via a fast catamaran that docks in Šibenik and, during the summer, continues to Ploče near the entrance to Mljet National Park.

For information: www.tp-dna.hr

The Jadrolinija car ferry connects Šibenik with passengers on the Pelješac Peninsula year-round.

Contact: www.jadrolinija.hr

A fast catamaran service also connects Dubrovnik directly with Ploče, offering a convenient 25-minute journey to the heart of Mljet National Park. Operating daily from May to mid-October, this connection is ideal for day trips, allowing visitors to explore the island before returning to Dubrovnik the same afternoon.

For information: www.krc.hr/dubrovnik-mljet

→ Catamarans to Mljet, Korčula, Lastovo, Hvar, Brač and Split

A catamaran line operates year-round from Dubrovnik to Korčula and Lastovo, while the high season brings additional fast catamarans to Mljet, Korčula, Hvar, Brač and Split.

Tickets can be purchased online at www.krc.hr or www.tp-dna.hr, or through local agents. Jadrolinija also runs a daily catamaran service from mid-June to the end of September along the Dubrovnik-Korčula-Hvar-Brač-Split route.

BY BUS

The Dubrovnik Bus Terminal is located in Čait, near the harbour. It includes booking counters, a left-luggage office, taxi stand and kiosks. Dubrovnik is connected by daily bus lines to all major Croatian cities, in addition to international routes.

Local buses also operate from the terminal. To reach the Old City from the main bus station, take local bus line 14 or 15, both of which depart regularly from the terminal and run directly to Pile Gate, the main entrance to Dubrovnik's historic centre.

The journey takes approximately 10 to 15 minutes, depending on traffic.

Public Bus Transport

During your stay, the most convenient way to explore Dubrovnik is by using the city's efficient public bus system. Operated by Libertas, the orange air-conditioned buses connect all city neighbourhoods with frequent regular services. Timetables are displayed at each stop and are available from hotels, the Tourist Board, or online at www.libertasdubrovnik.hr.

Bus lines to surrounding areas

→ Dubrovnik – Cetina: Line 10

This line connects Dubrovnik with Cetina, passing through the settlements of Šibenik, Mlini and Plat. Departs daily.

→ Dubrovnik – Zupa Dubrovačka: Line 14

Line 14 also connects Dubrovnik with the settlements in Zupa Dubrovačka, including Mlini and Šibenik. The journey takes about 20 minutes.

→ Dubrovnik – Šiben: Line 15

Line 15 passes through Šiben and Oršatic on the way to Šiben, known for its medieval walls and salt pans. Departs 3 times daily.

Dubrovnik – Šiben: Line 12

Line 12 connects Dubrovnik with Šiben, a settlement on the western coast, passing through Oršatic, Tramo and Tratinje. Departs 8 times daily.

→ Dubrovnik – Brač: Line 35

Line 35 connects Dubrovnik with Brač and passes through Zaton and Oršatic. Departs 6 times daily.

Car, Scooter, Bike and Boat Rental

Numerous agencies in Dubrovnik offer rentals of cars, scooters, bicycles and boats. A rental vehicle provides an ideal way to explore Dubrovnik's surroundings at your own pace.

A valid credit card and driving licence are typically required. For motorcycles over 125 cc, a category A licence is necessary. Renting a boat requires a valid skipper's licence.

Eco-conscious travellers can opt for Mynt, electric, magnetic, safe, fully electric and ideal for navigating the city.

More info: www.centmynt.com

Taxi Services

Taxi stands are located in key parts of the city and are clearly marked. Fares are posted visibly and the driver is obligated to turn on the fare meter from the beginning of the ride; if not, passengers are not obliged to pay. A standard taxi accommodates up to four passengers.

For a memorable experience, you may arrange panoramic city tours or full-/half-day excursions directly with the driver. Hideshow services such as Utes and Boks also operate throughout the Dubrovnik region.

For Yachters

With its breathtaking coastline, tranquil bays and island-dotted seascape, Dubrovnik is a paradise for sailors and yacht enthusiasts. Whether you're exploring at leisure or participating in one of the many annual regattas, Dubrovnik offers ideal sailing conditions and excellent mooring infrastructure.

The ACI Marina Dubrovnik in Ploče (Hijak Dubrovacko) is open year-round and is one of the safest marinas in the Adriatic for berthing and vessel maintenance. It is located just 2 km from Gruš Harbour and 4 km from the Old City, offering 500 berths, including 100 dry berths, with strong taxi connections to the city.

Marina Fraga Dubrovnik, located in Gruš Bay, offers 230 berths across six docks and accepts vessels up to 50 metres in length.

A limited number of berths, primarily for large yachts, are also available in Gruš Harbour. Berthing at the Orsen Sailing Club is mostly reserved for members.

ACI Marina "Vojko Radović" in Šibenik is open year-round, with 80 berths for vessels up to 50 metres. Its location provides natural protection from all winds.

Important Notice:

Upon entering Croatian territorial waters, boat captains must proceed directly to the nearest designated port of entry to complete customs clearance and pay applicable navigation fees and taxes.

In Dubrovnik, the Gruš Harbour is the year-round entry port, with seasonal border control also available in Cavtat.

A sojourn tax must be paid as a lump sum for all vessels spending nights on Croatian territory. The amount varies depending on boat size and duration of stay and can be paid online: www.nautika.hr/for.hr

History

Dubrovnik through the ages: An independent city-state

Dubrovnik was added to the UNESCO World Heritage List in 1979, a recognition that celebrated the city's historic heritage and the striking architecture of its Old City core. That same year reaffirmed the global significance of Dubrovnik, underlining the importance of preserving not only its urban and architectural achievements, but also its vibrant, living culture and heritage.

As the city evolved, so too did its surrounding areas. The earliest recorded human settlements in the region date back to Illyrian tribes, whose remnants can be found all along the coast. Notable archaeological discoveries have been made in Zupa Dubrovačka – from stone axes unearthed in Dubac, the oldest evidence of human activity in the area, to burial mounds – tumuli and ancient tombstones. In Konavle, Illyrian mounds known as “gomile” are found in Mikulici, along with the Mithraeum in Metoci and medieval tombstones – stele in Brucine and at St. Barbara in Dubrava. Additional Illyrian remnants have been discovered in Dubrovačko Primorje and on the island of Mljet.

Subsequent periods of Greek and Roman control left their marks as well, visible in inscriptions carved in stone throughout the region and on its islands. These civilizations established a long-lasting presence, leaving behind a network of settlements and artefacts that will bear witness to their era.

Venetian rule also left a significant imprint on Dubrovnik's architectural identity. Before the Republic of Dubrovnik attained independence, Venice influenced not only the city's urban fabric but also its broader socio-political and mercantile structures. These ties continued even after Dubrovnik gained independence from Venetian rule in the 14th century.

The Republic of Ragusa – more widely known as the Dubrovnik Republic – was officially founded in 1358, ushering in a golden era of independence and prosperity. Dubrovnik's renowned diplomacy played a pivotal role during this time, facilitating communication with major powers, including the Ottoman Empire, even before the Ottomans had expanded into the surrounding regions. The Ragusans navigated a complex relationship with their powerful rival, the Venetian Republic, with great tact and prudence.

Despite lacking a formal military, Dubrovnik operated as an independent state for nearly 450 years. Its strength lay in maritime trade, particularly its monopoly on salt, a highly prized commodity. The Republic maintained a mercantile fleet numbering in the hundreds, rivaling the largest fleets of the period. In the 16th century, the town of Šibenik boasted a fleet of 31 ships and two shipyards, while the port of Cavtat also played a significant role in supporting the Republic's maritime activities.

Shipbuilding was a vital industry, as were the trade routes and economic networks that ensured the Republic's stability. To govern effectively, the Republic established Rector's Palaces in key locations. These served as administrative centres and seats of local government. Beyond the Rector's Palace within Dubrovnik's city walls, once the official residence of the Rector, several others dotted the Republic's territory. One such example is the recently restored Rector's Palace in Šibenik, which was reopened to the public in 2017.

The island of Mljet was incorporated into the Republic in 1410, following the annexation of Dubrovnik's Primorje. In 1426, Korčula also became part of the Republic, providing essential agricultural and trade goods to the city.

Despite its political sophistication and economic strength, Dubrovnik could not withstand the force of nature. In 1667, the city was devastated by a massive earthquake, followed by a catastrophic fire. The destruction was immense – thousands of lives were lost, buildings were razed and the city was nearly annihilated. The disaster struck during the politically fraught Great War, as both the Venetian Republic and the Ottoman Empire vied for control of the region. Through diplomatic agility, however, Dubrovnik managed to preserve its sovereignty and rebuild its structures.

Throughout the 18th century, Dubrovnik re-established its merchant fleet and regained a key role in Mediterranean maritime trade. Yet it never returned to the heights of economic prosperity it had enjoyed before the Great Earthquake. Political shifts across Europe and the loss of trade privileges with the Ottoman Empire, coupled with the rise of new commercial powers, contributed to the city's gradual decline.

The end of the Dubrovnik Republic came in the early 19th century with the arrival of Napoleon's forces. Acting on the orders of French General Auguste de Marmont, the Senate of the Dubrovnik Republic was officially dissolved on January 31, 1808. Thus, Dubrovnik also faced the wider fate of Croatian territories under foreign rule.

Despite these transformations, Dubrovnik's cultural legacy continued to shine, particularly during the 19th and 20th centuries, when it played an influential role in the standardization of the Croatian language. Contributions to literature and linguistics are abundant, from the Glagolitic script discovered in Zupa Dubrovačka in 2007, the second longest of its kind in Croatia, to the enduring works of prose and poetry by Dubrovnik writers. The literary works of Martin Držić and Ivan Gundulić had a lasting impact, particularly their use of the "tokavian" dialect, which ultimately became the foundation of the modern Croatian standard. The Dubrovnik variant of this dialect and its accompanying literary heritage remain invaluable contributions to the evolution of the Croatian language.

Yet Dubrovnik's past also includes a darker chapter, its experience during the Homeland War. In October 1991, shortly after Croatia declared independence, the city was attacked. Despite its UNESCO status, the Old City came under heavy artillery fire during the Serbo-Montenegrin aggression. Dubrovnik and its surroundings were occupied, bombarded and plundered. The city endured an eight-month siege, with long periods without water or electricity and housed more than 11,000 refugees fleeing nearby conflict zones.

Ultimately, Croatia and with it, Dubrovnik, emerged victorious. The strength, dignity and resilience shown by the city and its citizens during the war stand as a powerful testament to the enduring spirit of liberty - "Libertas" - that has defined Dubrovnik for centuries. Once again, the city was written into the historical fabric of Europe and the world.

What to See & Do

Dubrovnik

Dubrovnik doesn't just dazzle, it reveals itself, layer by subtle layer. Slop through Pile Gate and into the Old City, where stone streets glisten underfoot and baroque facades glow in the Adriatic light. The Stradun, the city's polished main street, hums with life and lavender, framed by churches, palaces and the scent of salt on the breeze.

The City Walls offer Dubrovnik's finest perspective: rooftops stretching down to the sea, framed by fortresses and forested islands. The meticulously preserved Sponza Palace and Rector's Palace speak of diplomacy and independence, while the Franciscan Monastery still houses an operating pharmacy dating to 1372.

On the top of Mount Srd, the Homeland War Museum, housed inside the historic Fort Imperial, tells of the city's siege and survival in the early 1990s. The view from here, over terracotta roofs and deep-blue sea, is unforgettable.

Take to the water: ferries from the Old Port lead to Lokrum Island, where peacocks roam and a salt lake invites a quiet swim. Back in town, Riva Beach offers glamour, while the more offbeat Šutić and Džurđić beaches promise hidden serenity.

Beyond the walls, the Lapad neighbourhood provides pine-shaded paths and sea-view cafés, while Gruž is fast becoming Dubrovnik's culinary soul. In July and August, the Dubrovnik Summer Festival transforms the city into a stage, where music, theatre and dance are on show every night.

City Walls and Fortresses

The Dubrovnik City Walls are one of the best-preserved fortification systems in Europe and the city's most famous attraction. Stretching 1,940 metres, the walls include five fortresses and 16 towers and bastions and are open to visitors throughout the year. Entrances are located near St. Luke's Church, St. Saviour's Church by the Large-Omnibus Fountain, and St. John's Fortress near the Maritime Museum. Three fortresses are integrated into the walls: Minčeta, Bokar and St. John's, while Lovrjenac Fortress (St. Lawrence's) and Revelin Fortress stand separately outside the defensive system. Minčeta Fortress, located at the highest point of the city, once protected Dubrovnik from attacks from the north and remains a symbol of the city's defence. The Croatian flag flies from its top, alongside the Liberator flag during the Dubrovnik Summer Festival.

In the southwest corner of the city stands the Bokar Fortress, built in the 16th century to defend the western entrance and harbour area. Today it houses a collection of historic stone fragments. St. John's Fortress, constructed in 1346, protected the harbour. A large chain was once stretched across the harbour entrance from this fortress every night to prevent enemy ships from entering. Today the building houses the Maritime Museum and the city aquarium. Nearby lies the Porpomena stone pier, a beloved meeting place and swimming spot at the edge of the Old Harbour. At the eastern entrance to the town stands Revelin Fortress, surrounded by an ancient moat (now dry) and connected to the city by a stone bridge. Today it serves as a concert venue for the Dubrovnik Summer Festival and the Dubrovnik Symphony Orchestra, while the interior is home to the famous Cultural Club Revelin nightclubs.

St. Lawrence's Fortress - Lovćenac

Lovćenac Fortress sits dramatically on a 37-metre high cliff west of the Old City. Known as a symbol of Dubrovnik's independence, it defended the city from attacks from the sea. Above its entrance is the famous inscription: NON BENE PRO TUTO LIBERTAS VENDITUR AUR0

"Freedom is not to be sold for all the gold in the world." Today Lovćenac hosts one of the main stages of the Dubrovnik Summer Festival, internationally known as one of the best locations in the world for performances of Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Stradun

Stradun, also known as Ploča, is Dubrovnik's main street and central public space. Stretching between Pile Gate and Ploče Gate, it divides the Old City into northern and southern sections. The street was created in the 12th century, when a narrow sea channel separating two settlements was filled in. At the western entrance stands the Large Onofrić Fountain, built in 1498 by architect Onofrio della Cava, who designed Dubrovnik's historic water supply system. At the eastern end stands the Small Onofrić Fountain beside the bell tower, built in 1444. The tower's human figures, known as Marin and Rano (the Green Men), strike the bell every hour. Nearby stands the elegant Sponza Palace, a Gothic Renaissance building that once housed customs offices and the state treasury. Today it is home to the Dubrovnik State Archives, one of the most important historical archives in Europe. In front of the palace stands the Orlando Column, erected in 1498, symbolizing Dubrovnik's independence.

Historic Squares

Dubrovnik's Old City is dotted with historic squares. Marin Držić Square, near the Cathedral, leads toward the Old Harbour and the Karmen district. It is named after Dubrovnik's famous Renaissance playwright. Gundulić Square, named after Baroque poet Ivan Gundulić, hosts the city's daily open-air market where farmers from nearby villages sell fresh produce. A monumental Baroque staircase, designed in 1738, leads to Ruder Bušević Square, where the Jesuit Church of St. Ignace and the historic Jesuit College form one of the finest Baroque complexes in Dalmatia.

Churches and Monasteries

Among Dubrovnik's most important religious buildings is the Church of St. Blaise, dedicated to the city's patron saint and built in 1705 in Baroque style. At the western end of Stradun stands the Church of St. Saviour, constructed in 1710 after the city survived an earthquake. Remarkably, this church was one of only a few buildings that survived a much more devastating earthquake in 1867.

The Franciscan Monastery is home to one of the oldest pharmacies in Europe, founded in 1377 and still operating today. The Dubrovnik Cathedral, rebuilt in the early 18th century, houses a rich treasury of artwork, including a painting by Titian. According to legend, an earlier cathedral on this site was funded by Richard the Lionheart after he survived a shipwreck near Lokrum Island in 1192. The Dominican Monastery, one of the largest Gothic buildings on the Croatian coast, contains valuable artworks and manuscripts, including a Bible from the 12th century.

The Elaphiti Islands

The Elaphiti Islands are a group of 13 islands northwest of Dubrovnik, including the three main islands of Korčula, Lopud and Šipan. They were part of the Dubrovnik Republic from the 17th century until its fall in 1918. Today they are popular day-trip destinations, known for sandy beaches, historic churches and traditional Dalmatian cuisine. Highlights include Šunj Beach on Lopud, historic churches on Korčula, and the Brijunička summer villa on Šipan. Ferries depart daily from Gruž harbor.

Mount Srđ and the Cable Car

Rising 415 metres above Dubrovnik, Mount Srđ offers spectacular panoramic views of the Old City and surrounding islands. Visitors can reach the summit by cable car, taxi or hiking trail. At the top stands Fort Imperial, which now houses a museum dedicated to the 1991-1995 Homeland War. The cable car, first built in 1962 and rebuilt after the war, connects the Old City with the summit in just a few minutes.

Old City Harbour

The Old Harbour was designed largely by Dubrovnik architect Pasko Milčević in the 15th century. A stone breakwater known as Kalo protects the harbour from waves and attacks. At night a chain was once stretched across the harbour entrance from St. John's Fortress to block enemy ships. Today the harbour remains one of Dubrovnik's most picturesque locations and a reminder of the city's powerful maritime history.

Lazareti Complex

The Lazareti near Ploče Gate form one of the best preserved quarantine complexes in the Mediterranean. Built between 1547 and 1567, they protected Dubrovnik from infectious diseases arriving by sea. Today the complex serves as a creative cultural hub, hosting exhibitions, concerts and performances.

Korčula Korčula

Korčula whispers with the rhythms of nature: rustling cypress trees, murmuring streams and the soft clink of vineyard tools. This lush southern tip of Croatia, stretching from Snježnica Mountain to the Adriatic, is a tapestry of tradition, where olive trees, grapes and folkloric coexist in timeless harmony.

Start in Cavtat, an idyllic harbour of palm-fringed promenades and terracotta rooftops. Visit the Vlaho Bukovac House: an museum, explore galleries, or dine by the bay. Climb to the Kačić Mausoleum and visit its white stone chapel, where the views stretch to Dubrovnik and beyond.

Head inland to Glipi, where Sunday folkloric dances and the Korčula Country Museum reveal living traditions of silk, embroidery and music. Inland agriturismo estates offer local wine, meats, liqueurs and olive oil fresh from the press.

High above, Sokol Grad, a medieval fortress, watches over the valley, while Snježnica's hiking trails lead to alpine meadows with Adriatic views. For adventure, cycle through the vineyards or ride horses along wooded paths. At the old Ljuta River mill, wheels still turn, echoing centuries past. Korčula is where heritage and landscape embrace in quiet beauty.

Zupa Dubrovačka

Tucked between Dubrovnik and Cavtat, Zupa Dubrovačka is a quiet stretch of coastline where life slows and the sea shimmers. The seaside villages of Mlini, Šetretum and Plat offer simple pleasures, sun-warmed stone and Adriatic charm without the crowds.

Mlini is poetic: stone quays, rushing streams and old watermills that gave the village its name. In nearby Šetretum, a wide beach and tree-lined promenade invite lazy afternoons and sunset strolls. Plat is even more peaceful, ideal for long swims, cliffside naps and candlelit dinners by the sea.

Venture inland and you'll find hillside trails, chapels among olive trees and views that sweep across the coast. The Church of St. Hilary in Mlini is a baroque gem, while rustic paths from Ploče lead down through farms and vineyard to the glimmering sea.

Markets overflow with sun-ripened tomatoes and local wine. Restaurants focus on freshness: black risotto, grilled fish and glasses of chilled local wine. If you're lucky, you might stumble on a klapa vocal concert or fishermen's night under the stars.

Close to Dubrovnik, yet a world apart, Zupa Dubrovačka is the kind of place where you come to relax and never quite want to leave.

Dubrovačko Primorje

Tucked away just northwest of Dubrovnik, Dubrovačko Primorje offers a gentler, quieter Croatia. This under-the-radar coastal stretch is a mosaic of olive groves, hidden coves, sleepy villages and sun-bleached chapels, ideal for those seeking authenticity over spectacle.

Begin in Šibenik, the region's heart, where green hills cradle a calm bay dotted with boats. Once a retreat for Dubrovnik's nobles, elegance echoes in its churches and the 17th century Rector's Palace, now a beautifully restored cultural site. Nearby, the Heritage House of Dubrovačko Primorje showcases local crafts, music and customs, an intimate museum preserving rural life with care.

Inland, villages like Barja and Gričarić offer snapshots of Dalmatian tradition, grapevines, gardens and evening lights. Scattered further afield, hamlets such as Majkovi and Imovica feel timeless. Listen to the silence, find chapels behind cypressen and discover stark, medieval tombstones carved with mysterious symbols, part of a UNESCO World Heritage listing.

Follow old Napoleonic roads through wild valleys, or find unnamed beaches near Barjci, shaded by pines and fig trees. Here, culture lives in the small details, baroque churches, summer festivals and songs sung beneath the stars. In Dubrovačko Primorje, nothing is staged, only quietly, beautifully real.

Mljet Island

Mljet is the Adriatic's most mysterious island – remote, green and shrouded in myth. Said to be the place where Odysseus was held by Calypso, this forested escape whispers instead of shouts. Here, pine-scented trails, subterranean lakes and silence reign.

The western third of the island is Mljet National Park, a sanctuary of calm. Two shimmering lakes, the Great and Small Lakes, stretch beneath pine-covered hills, their waters turning from turquoise to ink with the sun. Cycle the shaded paths, kayak in dawn, or take a boat to St. Mary's Island, where a 12th century Benedictine monastery now hosts a quiet cafe under the trees.

Venture east and life slows further. In Babinjsko Polje, stone homes and vegetable gardens cling to the hillside. To the south lies Saplunara, one of Dalmatia's rare sandy beaches, golden and fringed with pine. In the north, Okrugljak offers serene vistas, fresh seafood and the warm company of local fishermen.

The island's pristine interior invites hikers to Mitnica or along forested ridges. Blace Bay, a hidden lagoon near Saplunara, rewards explorers with solitude and shimmering shallows. Scattered ruins, Roman – Illyrian – romantic, whisper a long, quiet history. Nights end with wine by the sea, beneath a canopy of stars.

Dubrovnik: A City of Living Tradition

Preserving Our Heritage through Festivals and Folklore

There are many cities with beautiful facades and charming piazzas and then there are places like Dubrovnik, where heritage radiates from every stone. Here, tradition is not a thing of the past, but a lived and loved reality. To walk through this city is to trace the footprints of centuries; to stay here is to become part of a cultural tapestry woven with reverence and celebration.

The most vivid expression of this cultural continuum arrives every year on February 3, when Dubrovnik bursts into pagantry for the Festival of Saint Blaise, its beloved patron saint. It is a day when the city's ancient soul reveals itself. Honoured by UNESCO as Intangible Cultural Heritage, this celebration reaches beyond liturgical formality into the deepest annals of civic identity and historical pride. From early morning to nightfall, the old town is transformed into a living theatre: market-bearing "troubadours" thunder in salute, crimson and gold banners flutter and locals don traditional finery passed down through generations.

Children carry miniature flags, women pin flowers into their hair and the air is laden with the scent of warm bread being blessed for the feast.

Saint Blaise is everywhere. His image is carved into the stonework of palaces, etched into the seals of Dubrovnik's Republic, perched atop fountains and churches and even embroidered onto the city flag. Villages throughout the region bear his name on chapels and in folk songs. It is not just reverence for a saint, but for a protector who is believed to have saved the city from sieges, plagues and storms.

Preserving this living history is no small feat, but the people of Dubrovnik do so with unwavering devotion. Leading the charge is Ludo, the region's premier folkloric ensemble and a cultural institution with few equals in Croatia. For over half a century, Ludo has performed regularly in the picturesque vaults of Lazarevi, Dubrovnik's medieval quarantine complex turned creative haven. Every summer, their spirited choreographies and rich harmonies become a key part of the Dubrovnik Summer Festival. With more than 100 national costumes in their collection, from practical working garments to sumptuous ceremonial ensembles, Ludo is not just preserving traditions – they are bringing it to life.

But the guardians of Dubrovnik's folklore extend far beyond Ludo. Across Korčula, Župa Dubrovačka, Mljet Island and the rural stretches of Dubrovačko Primorje, cultural and arts societies work year-round to uphold the customs of their ancestors. In the village of Čilipi, the Culture and Art Society Čilipi has kept Sunday folklore performances alive since 1963, inviting audiences to witness dances, songs and rituals rooted in the rhythm of agricultural life. Each community contributes its own thread to the regional tapestry, with groups like 'Marko Marojević' in Župa Dubrovačka and 'Nako Nodilo' on Mljet Island ensuring that both the spirit and the artistry of the past remain firmly in the present.

For these communities, traditional costume is more than decorative attire – it is storytelling in textile. A woman's dress might signify her marital status, her village, or even her mood. Embroidery is especially telling and none more so than that of Korčula and Mljet Island. Korčula silk threads, hand-dyed and delicately stitched, once marked a young girl's readiness for marriage and today they appear on everything from modern fashion accessories to cherished souvenirs.

Jewelry, too, holds profound meaning. Many of the designs worn today date back to the times of the Dubrovnik Republic and remain unchanged – evidence of a culture that honours its roots. The gold kolarni necklaces of Zupa Dubrovačka and Dubrovačko Primorje gleam with naive simplicity, while Korčula's intricate vrtilice and earrings reflect exceptional craftsmanship. On the island of Mljet, distinctive pieces such as the gradine earrings, kolarni, and the snake-shaped zanje ring carry a more symbolic, almost mythic character.

Yes, Dubrovnik's heritage is not confined to fabric and gold. Its spiritual life breathes in carols sung by candlelight on Christmas Eve, in songs that echo through alleyways on New Year's Eve and in melodies that rise from stone courtyards during local festivals. These carols, inscribed in the Croatian Registry of Cultural Property, are more than music. They are hymns to identity, passed down through generations and still sung with the same sincerity that once filled the city in the 15th century.

And then there is the sea, always the sea. The famed Wild League, Dubrovnik's fiercely beloved amateur water polo tournament, is not just a sporting event but a civic ritual. Played on sun-drenched beaches with the dramatic final match held in the Old Port, it draws locals of all ages and skill levels. Many of the city's professional athletes have taken part, diving in beside their neighbours, uniting competition with community. The prestigious Jug water polo club, the most decorated in Croatia, stands as a symbol of the city's ongoing commitment to excellence and pride in its unique sporting culture.

In Dubrovnik, tradition is not something to be re-enacted for tourists. It is lived. It is worn in the folds of embroidered skirts, sung on feast days, played in the waters of the Adriatic and protected fiercely through time. To visit here is not just to observe the past, but to join it, however briefly, in its continual unfolding. And as the banners rise for Saint Blaise and the songs echo across the city walls, it becomes clear: this is not a place where heritage sleeps in silence. Here, it sings.

The Beauty of Nature

‘Will the eternal paradise be more beautiful than this one of mine?’

Discovering such a remarkable level of biodiversity within a relatively small geographical area is a rarity on a global scale – but this is precisely what defines the southernmost part of Croatia. This region is home to a wealth of endemic plant and animal species, flourishing across land and sea, creating a vibrant, living mosaic of natural heritage.

Smallmouth bass

A shining example of this exceptional biodiversity and good diversity is the island of Mljet. Covering just over 100 square kilometres, the island is home to areas designated as significant landscapes, parts of the Natura 2000 ecological network and most notably, a national park, Croatia's highest level of environmental protection. Mljet Island National Park spans 5,375 hectares and was established in 1960, making it the oldest marine park in the Mediterranean. Often referred to as 'the most forested island in the Adriatic,' Mljet owes this title to its dense Aleppo-pine forests, which cover 90% of the park's surface. The park's protected status is rooted in the richness of its ecosystem, which supports a diverse range of native flora and fauna. Experience the natural beauty of this island at the Great and Small Lakes, sandy coves, freshwater springs, salt-water inlets and subterranean geological features such as caves, caverns and sinkholes, home to many rare and endemic species.

Likewise, just off the coast of Dubrovnik lies the lush island of Lokrum, a designated nature reserve and a cherished day-trip destination for both locals and visitors. Despite its popularity, Lokrum remains a sanctuary of unspoiled nature. Nearby, Rijeka Dubrovačka and the Trsteno Arboretum have witnessed centuries of harmonious interaction between people and the environment, where cultivated landscapes blend seamlessly with architectural heritage and protected natural features. The Trsteno Arboretum, considered one of the oldest examples of landscape architecture in Europe, continues this tradition. Its entrance is guarded by majestic plane trees over five centuries old.

The summer villas of Dubrovnik, perched along the banks of Rijeka Dubrovačka, offer another vivid example of this bond. Set near the source of the Neretva River, one of the shortest yet most biodiverse rivers in the world, these villas reflect the long-standing respect for nature among Dubrovnik's nobility. Dubrovačko Primorje, a region of just over 2,000 residents scattered across picturesque villages, stands as a haven of pristine tranquility. The Bay of Mali Šum, part of the Natura 2000 network, is a protected marine area of international importance. This protection extends to Bay of Zupa Dubrovačka and much of Kotarje, affirming the region's ecological significance. The Adriatic Sea here is not only rich in biodiversity but also in bio-productivity, particularly in shellfish cultivation. Mariculture and nature coexist gracefully, exemplified by the shellfish hatchery in Šimuni, which has become a model of sustainable aquaculture.

The mainland is no less captivating. The landscape bursts with citrus groves, palms, holm oaks and medicinal Mediterranean herbs – horehound, horeh, myrtle and many others. Among the fauna, the Herpetological Reserve of the Maklevo estate and the pond in Maklevo stand out as unique natural treasures.

Croatia's southernmost river, the Neretva, winds its way through the fertile Kotarje valley, joined by the Kotarječka stream, it nourishes the verdant Kotarje fields. The Neretva is teeming with life, just like the dramatic cliffs of Kotarje, which rise majestically above the region. Towering above them all is Sušica, the southernmost peak of the Dinaric Alps, richly carpeted with aromatic and healing herbs. Cypress trees dot the rolling hills, creating the iconic landscape of Kotarje and serving as enduring symbols of the region.

Together, Zupa Dubrovačka and Kotarje form a natural amphitheatre around the Bay of Zupa, an area renowned for its ornithological reserves. The islands of Mljet, Brač and Dubrovnik provide critical nesting grounds for yellow-legged gulls and other seabirds, ensuring the continued vitality of local birdlife.

The region's climate, geographic position and ecological wealth weave an intricate tapestry of natural beauty. It is no surprise that the great Dubrovnik writer Ivo Vojnović once pondered: "Will the eternal paradise be more beautiful than this one of mine?" In the landscapes of southern Dalmatia, one begins to understand exactly what he meant.

Eating Locally

In Dubrovnik, food is not merely nourishment, it is memory, ritual and identity. The region's cuisine, shaped by centuries of maritime trade, cultural fusion and deep-rooted local customs, is a living chronicle of flavour. Here, every meal tells a story of seafaring ancestors, sunny gardens, festive tables and sacred traditions passed down through generations.

Centuries ago, Dubrovnik's sailors returned home not just with tales of distant shores, but with new ingredients, aromatic herbs and culinary inspiration. These worldly flavours were lovingly folded into the region's traditional recipes, birthing a gastronomy that is at once refined and rustic. Today, this legacy lives on in dishes that blend sophistication with comfort, like the beloved špeš maharuli, a rich, slow-cooked beef ragout spooned over handmade pasta, served during grand celebrations and intimate Sunday lunches.

The Republic never turned its back on global influences. Black risotto, stained with squid ink and bursting with briny depth; paštitada, a beef dish marinated in wine and spices, slowly braised until tender; and the classic Mediterranean stuni – grilled fish, seasonal vegetables and golden olive oil – are staples that graced both aristocratic salons and coastal kitchens. Ragusans were early adopters of food trends, delighting in exotic spices and treating fruits as prized delicacies.

Fish has always been the star of the Dubrovnik table. Whether it's sushi, mudde, or stina (a local sashimi), seafood here is caught fresh and served simply. From the river Ljuta in Kotor to the salty shores of Brač, Cavtat and Mljet Island, restaurants plate up treasures from sea and stream with reverence for both ingredient and season.

Desserts, too, reflect this balance of abundance and restraint. There's mašna, a Dubrovnik-style crème caramel, or the earthy carob cake, based on the island's ancient vines. These were often followed by an aromatic lipanj: ružica made from rose petals, or homemade infusions of cherry, walnut, or logan. A final flourish of candied almonds – bristling manduli or orange peels – amandini crowned our the meal.

Venison island and the culinary story deepens. In the villages of Rastava, Zupa Dubrovačka and beyond, farm-to-table isn't a trend—it's a way of life. Here, meals are brought forth from the land: peka—fire-range meats slow-cooked under iron domes, hearty zeleni mnenstru with leafy greens and smoked meats, or platters of aged cheese, olives and air-dried prosciutto. In the island of Mljet's wild hinterland, foraged greens and venison yield dishes of rustic beauty and bold flavor.

By the sea, in places like Brijuni in Dubrovačka Primorje, you'll find Europe's oldest farmed delicacy, the flat oyster, Ostrea edulis, prized for its briny sweetness. Shellfish thrive in the pure Adriatic waters and their presence on menus is a celebration of heritage as much as a harvest.

The region's meat offerings, often created with few ingredients but infinite care, are true masterpieces. Women in home kitchens crafted quince jelly—kondinguta, candy made from grapo trim—mantula, airy puff-pastry sponge cakes, žagiba simulača made of wheat grits and almond confectious like krahina, crunchy and golden with sugar.

And then there is the wine. Once served only on diplomatic occasions, the noble Mahina Dubrovačka is enjoying a well-deserved renaissance. This elegant white wine, light yet layered, is a useful companion to seafood or contemplation. Across Korcula's vineyards, red varietals like merlot, cabernet sauvignon, kadarni and plavac mali express the land's sunlit intensity. Meanwhile, Mljet Island offers rare indigenous grapes—buženac, slipet, arkiz waiting to be rediscovered.

To dine in Dubrovnik is to experience something greater than the meal itself. It is to honor the land, the sea, the heritage and the people who keep its culinary heart beating. From lavish feasts to humble hearths, each bite is a love note to a region that understands food not just as pleasure—but as poetry.

Where to Stay: Dubrovnik and Beyond

Whether in the heart of Dubrovnik or among the serene coastal towns and countryside, accommodation options in this region offer something for every taste, style, and budget. From charming private rooms and lavishly appointed apartments to luxury hotels, rural estates, and coastal campsites, visitors are invited to tailor their stay to suit their own rhythm.

Throughout the city and its surroundings, hotels range from modest establishments to renowned luxury five-star properties overlooking the sea, set within lush parkland, or just steps from the Old City. Facilities are generous and often award-winning, placing Dubrovnik hospitality firmly on the global map.

Private accommodation in Dubrovnik is a story of warmth and welcome. The generosity of local hosts has fostered a wide and vibrant offer: elegant villas, seafront apartments, countryside retreats, and cozy town rentals. Whether you're seeking the charm of a homestay, the exclusivity of a luxury villa, or the comfort of a family-run guesthouse, the options are both abundant and beautifully diverse.

The surrounding region offers its own treasures. Picturesque stone villages hide stunning rural villas and holiday homes that balance rustic charm with modern comfort. For adventurers, auto camps and campgrounds – many of them seaside – allow for immersive experiences between the stars, close to the sea and nature.

Nautical travellers, too, will find themselves at home. Exploring the Adriatic by boat is a dream realised in Dubrovnik's three marinas: the award-winning ACI Marina in Kumbac just outside the city, the modern ACI Marina 'Vojko Vukobratović' in Šibenik and the state-of-the-art Marina Frapa in Gruš Bay. Each provides well-equipped berths and a full suite of services, welcoming everyone from sailing enthusiasts to luxury yacht passengers.

Whether anchored in a marina, tucked away in a hillside villa, or waking to the sunrise in a coastal campsite, staying in and around Dubrovnik is always more than just a place to sleep – it's a richly woven part of the experience itself.

The Beaches of Dubrovnik and Beyond

Choosing the most beautiful beach might seem like a difficult task

From early spring through late autumn, the crystalline waters of the Adriatic remain warm and welcoming, setting the stage for an unforgettable seaside escape. Here, the only dilemma is choosing your beach: golden sands, smooth pebbles, or sculpted stone.

Begin at Rijeke Beach, Dubrovnik's iconic main beach with a cinematic view of the Old City walls and the forested island of Lokrum. So, beside the historic Lazareti complex—once a quarantine station, now a vibrant art venue—Rijeke blends past and present in a single unadorned spot. To the east, St. Jacob's Beach offers a quieter atmosphere, accessed by a long staircase.

For a boisterous rhythm, visit the Lapad Bay and Babin Kuk peninsulas. Here, Dubrovnik's urban beaches offer everything from stylish cocktails at Capotaormina Beach to playful water sports and upscale hotel access. On Lokrum Island, nature lovers find their slice of solitude among rocky outcrops and secluded coves, surrounded by cypress trees and peacocks, as well as a secluded designated nude beach.

Those in search of serenity will fall under the spell of Senj Beach on Loped Island. With a crescent of soft white sand stretching gently into the turquoise shallows, it's a favourite of barefoot wanderers and families alike.

Yes, Dubrovnik's coastal charms extend far beyond city limits. Scenic gems dot the shoreline like pearls: Štano, Budina in Dubrič and the hidden retreats of Doli, Smokvina and Šibenovci each offer a private haven where time seems to pause. The beaches of Krnatec are secluded stretches of coast that feel like a Mediterranean escape, dramatically carved into the cliffs, reached by winding coastal paths, and often recognised as some of the world's most photogenic seaside spots.

Molunac, Croatia's southernmost village, harbours a constellation of coves ideal for unpluging completely. Meanwhile, Cavtat's graceful promenade curves around a sparkling bay, lined with elegant hotel beaches that invite languid afternoons and golden-hour swims. Karpur, Mlin and Šibenici provide family-friendly beaches, shaded walks and just enough cafe culture to linger longer.

And then there is Mljet Island – a verdant island sanctuary where beaches feel mythic. Baputara, with its rim of untouched sandy lips, is not only beach-eating but also a protected natural landscape. The coves of Gornjirika, Krnatica and Rupa, the latter a haven for the rare Mediterranean monk seal, complete this island's offering of pristine isolation.

Whether you seek postcard perfection, barefoot simplicity, or Jewish coastal comfort, southern Croatia offers a beach for every desire. The Adriatic doesn't just hug the shore – it elevates it into an experience, one wave at a time.

Outdoor Activities

Dubrovnik, the jewel of the Adriatic and one of the world's most celebrated travel destinations, is famed not only for its cultural landmarks and rich historical tapestry, but also for its growing reputation as a hub for adventure tourism. While its iconic medieval city walls and narrow stone streets continue to enchant history lovers, the city and its surrounding landscapes offer a vibrant invitation to travelers seeking a more active and exhilarating escape.

From cycling along dramatic coastal routes to hiking panoramic mountain trails, diving into the depths of the crystal-clear sea, riding horseback through olive groves, or revving across rugged terrain on a buggy safari, Dubrovnik promises a different kind of thrill for every curious soul. Here, heritage and adrenaline are not opposites but companions, creating unforgettable moments in a setting where nature, history and culture converge.

Biking

In the undulating countryside of Dubrovnik's Primorje, history and recreation go hand-in-hand. The region's first officially marked thematic cycling route, Sući Dubrovačkog Primorja is an almost 50-kilometer journey stretching from Matuša to Ilirina. Along the way, cyclists pass ancient stacci, medieval tombstones carved with enigmatic symbols, silent witnesses to centuries gone by. Here, every push of the pedal becomes a passage through time.

While Dubrovnik's Old City, with its polished limestone alleys and throngs of visitors, may not be ideal for cycling, its surrounding landscapes open up a world of two-wheeled wonder. Whether it's a glimpse of the Elaphiti Islands, a distant view of the walled city glowing at sunset, or the scent of wild herbs wafting from dry stone terraces, the routes are thoughtfully designed to enhance, rather than distract, the pristine natural environment. A bicycle ride with a sea view? Absolutely priceless.

In the sunny fields and gentle hills of Konavle, many trails follow old walking routes and some even re-purpose former railway lines. The legendary Cera Trail, once travelled by locomotive, now welcomes hikers and cyclists eager to explore its rich rural heritage. Winding through pine forests, olive groves and tiny hamlets, it's a favourite among both casual riders and intrepid explorers.

A popular route here begins in Čilipi and traces a scenic 25-kilometer arc through Duga Rada and across the fertile plains of Konavle polje. Another trail, slightly longer at 26 kilometres, takes you through the highlands of Gornja Rada and descends into Cavtat, with panoramic views and cultural touchpoints along the way. For those short on time or stamina, a third, 10-kilometer route loops through the sleepy villages of Duga Rada before returning to Čilipi.

There's a particular charm to cycling through Dubrovnik's lesser-known upland villages (Gornja ulaz), orchiding past olive groves in Zupa Dubrovačka. These rides are not about speed but serenity. Birds chirp, cicadas hum and occasionally, you'll pass a farmer's tractor or a curious donkey peering from a stone-walled enclosure. The Elaphiti Islands, accessible by boat, offer further enchantment for those wishing to combine a cycling adventure with island-hopping tranquillity.

And then there's Mljet Island, Croatia's greenest island and a cyclist's dream. Rugged, remote and shrouded in legend, this island is blessed with diverse trails ranging from flat, family-friendly asphalt loops to rocky, red-dirt tracks perfect for mountain biking. Some routes are gentle others demand grit and determination. All are unforgettable.

The Mjete Hiking Circuit, nearly 90 kilometres long, can be adapted for bikes and divided into four epic legs: Pomona-Govesdari, Govesdari-Blata, Blata-Bogorici-Babina Polje and Babina Polje-Veliki Grad-Sobra. With 10 marked checkpoints, trail stamps and panoramic pit stops, it's a pilgrimage of sorts, for nature lovers with strong calves.

Yet the most scenic ride of all may be the circular path that loops through Mjete National Park, around the external Ciria and Small Lakes and past the Benedictine monastery that floats like a mirage in the centre. From there, routes fan out to Pomona and Polace, with shaded benches, sea breezes and intoxicating views at every turn.

Ride further south and you'll find Blata, home to a scenic loop overlooking mysterious wetlands known as Blatine. Or explore the central highlands via the Sobra-Babina Polje-Maratonici trail, which passes olive groves, ancient chapels and secret caves where the only sound is your own breath. One not to miss is the short but spectacular run to Sapunara, where the path leads straight to a trio of golden sandy beaches – perfect for a cooling dip before the ride back.

Most of island of Mjete's routes mix asphalt with gravel, offering options for every level – from leisurely cruisers to ambitious off-roaders. Distances range from 5 to 90 kilometres and the terrain fluctuates between moderate and demanding.

Diving

The underwater world of Dubrovnik is just as captivating as its coastline and islands, as divers will readily confirm. The seabed of southern Croatia feels like an open-air museum beneath the surface, offering rich marine life alongside caves, underwater walls and exceptional visibility.

One of the most remarkable archaeological diving sites in the Adriatic can be found near Cavtat. Sometime during the 5th century, a Roman ship carrying around 50,000 litres of oil sank here, leaving behind a vast field of amphorae. Today, more than a thousand of these ancient vessels lie preserved on the seabed. Located at a depth of around 30 metres, the site can be explored with professional guidance and remains one of the most impressive underwater heritage locations in the Mediterranean.

Further south, around the island of Mljet, diving takes on a different character. Here, the focus shifts to natural beauty: colourful reefs, dramatic underwater cliffs, caves and historic shipwrecks. Visibility often exceeds 30 metres, making the area ideal for both beginners and experienced divers.

One of the most unique sites is the wreck of the ship Tina, which sank in 1944 near Cape Račnjic. Resting at a depth between 10 and 33 metres, it is accessible to a wide range of divers and has become home to a thriving marine ecosystem.

Within Mljet National Park, the Great and Small Lakes offer a unique diving experience, particularly in the Soline Channel, where strong currents mix salt and fresh water. The seabed here is rich with seagrass meadows, supporting octopus, lobsters, many eels and groupers, while dolphins are occasionally spotted on the surface.

Other notable locations include the waters around Rapa Bay and the Bay of Slane, where numerous shipwrecks from various historical periods lie beneath the surface, adding further depth to Dubrovnik's already diverse diving scene.

Hiking Trails

Though best known for its cinematic city walls, Baroque churches, and UNESCO World Heritage Old City, Dubrovnik reveals a more rugged and when you trade limestone streets for winding mountain trails. The city and the surrounding region offer a surprising bounty of hiking routes that thread through pine forests, skin along cliffs, scale mountains, and even traverse islands. For the curious traveller, this is Croatia at its rawest and most rewarding.

The Mula Petka trail, a two-kilometre loop that winds behind houses and above rooftops, offers shaded serenity and views of the sea, a micro-escape in the middle of it all. The trail begins just behind Hotel Dubrovnik Palace on the Lapad peninsula, where a small path leads directly into the pine forest. To reach the starting point, take bus line number 4 (Hotel Palace) from Pile Gate or the Old City – it runs frequently and stops right outside the hotel, at the end of the route. If arriving by car, there is limited parking near the hotel entrance. The area is also accessible on foot from Lapad Bay, making it one of Dubrovnik's most convenient and rewarding short hikes.

Beyond the city, a 30-kilometre network of hiking and cycling trails connects coastal paths with quieter inland landscapes, where traditional villages and dry-stone walls bring us back to the past. The Camino

Dubrovnik stretches 145 kilometres towards Medugorje, offering a seven-day route inspired by the Camino de Santiago.

Closer to the city, the walk to Orsula viewpoint winds through Mediterranean vegetation before opening onto sweeping Adriatic views. Meanwhile, the coastal paths of Lapad provide an easy, scenic route along the shoreline, shaded by pine trees and accessible to all.

But to truly ascend, head for Mount Srđ. Towering above the Old City, this historic hill played a crucial role in Dubrovnik's defence during the Homeland War of the early 1990s. Today, it welcomes hikers via several trails that originate from the Old Town, Ćipri, or Šumice. At the summit awaits Fort Imperial, home to the Homeland War Museum, as well as a panoramic overlook with views of the city and the scattered jewels of the Dalmatian Islands. It's a moderate climb, and your reward is a stunning cinematic sweep of Dubrovnik.

Speaking of Dalmatian Islands, they are home to some of the most scenic lakes in the region. On Kalceop (Kalamota), the short but striking Gornje Donje Čelo trail winds through island life, olive groves, and pine-scented breezes. For something slightly more adventurous, follow the path to Špiža Residencija, a sea cave that feels like a secret.

Šepat, the largest of the Elaphiti, offers the tranquil Olive Route from Šutural to Puhčera, immersing walkers in the rhythm of Mediterranean island life. On Ispud, the Benštin Rta trail hugs the coast, promising sea views and solitude. On the mainland, Dubrovnik's suburban neighbourhoods also reward the wanderer. Rijeka Dubrovačka, a lush valley where freshwater meets the sea, offers paths and moderate half-day hikes.

South of the city, the trails of Župa Dubrovačka and Kamešić open a world of coastal promiscuities, country meals and ancient sanctuaries. The Cavtat - Metković - Glipa trail mixes nature with history, passing Roman temples and folkloric heartlands. The Ronald Brown Path, from Obod to Velji Do, climbs high above Cavtat for a glorious vista of Dubrovnik's Riviera.

Then there's the queen of them all anyway - Sinjinalica. At 1,234 metres, it is the southernmost peak of the Dinaric Alps. The name itself speaks to its famed legacy, with snow sometimes lingering into spring. The marked trail from Mišanići or Kuma Kamenica leads through forests and open ridges to panoramic views.

The western countryside, known as Dubrovačko Primorje, is a hiker's playground. With the help of the new Tourist Hiking Map and a detailed online network of bike and hiking paths, you can set off with ease. The marine wind among historic waypoints and natural gems, ideal for the explorer-at-heart.

And finally, Mljet - a national park unto itself, this emerald island is faced with marked paths. The circular route around Great and Small Lakes offers a peaceful walk along subwater lakes. Climb Metković for the best views in the park or take on the full 43 km Mljet Hiking Trail over multiple days. From Krčić Polje's archaeological sites to the sleepy cove of Grabova, every trail is a journey into lush green silence.

Horse Riding

Korčula is a land of quiet surprises, where heritage and wilderness meet beneath wide skies. Among its many offerings is a unique experience for equestrian lovers: a guided horseback tour that begins in the peaceful village of Popovici. Here, calm, well-trained horses and licensed guides lead the way on an unforgettable journey.

Known as the Blue Trail, the route is designed for all levels, safe and scenic for beginners, yet rewarding for experienced riders. The pace is intentionally slow, allowing every rider to soak in the beauty of the Korčula landscape, from fertile fields to olive groves, all the way to the monumental Korčulake njive, the dramatic, projected cliffs where the land meets the sea.

Kayak & Canoe

You can rent a kayak anywhere along the Adriatic coast, but only in Dubrovnik does the paddle transform into a passport for myth and magic. Imagine drifting on the sparkling sea as ancient stone walls rise before you, Lokrum shimmers in the distance and the splash of oars mutes the silence of a hidden cave. Kayaking here isn't just a water sport, it's a cinematic experience of Adriatic splendour.

There is something quietly majestic about circling Dubrovnik's UNESCO-protected Old City by kayak. At water level, the medieval battlements appear even more imposing, the waves lap gently against your small craft and the bustling city above becomes a distant murmur. The jewel-toned waters take you past the forested isle of Lokrum, where peacocks roam and legends of a monk's curse swirl in the air. And then, like a secret door in a fairy tale, you glide into the ethereal blue of Bečići Cave, a secluded grotto tucked into the rocky shore just outside the city.

Kayak rental stations are dotted along the coast and most excursions are led by licensed guides who ensure every detail, from safety briefings to snug life jackets, is perfectly in place. The kayaks themselves are top-quality and seaworthy, built for both beginners and seasoned paddlers. Depending on the season and sea conditions, guides tailor the routes, sometimes adding recommended stops for independents to land-hopping by paddle.

If Dubrovnik is a theatrical epic, then Zupa Dubrovačka and Cavtat offer the serene ballet. Renting a kayak here allows you to trace a gentler coastline, rich in natural detail and perfect for quiet exploration. Glide through the protected waters of Zupa Bay, past tiny islets coated in pine trees, where the only traffic is the darting of fish below you and the flight of gulls above. In Cavtat, the coastline tells tales of ancient Epidaurum and every cove feels like a private discovery. The area is a haven for marine flora and fauna, offering an intimate encounter with the Adriatic's biodiversity.

For those who seek not just a paddle but a pulse-quickening plunge into nature, Mljet Island delivers. Croatia's greenest island, a vision of unspoiled wilderness and mythological charm, elevates kayaking into something more primal and profound. Here, both kayakers and canoes are available for rent, opening up a world of aquatic adventure.

Begin your journey on Cres and Dugi Otok, Mljet's twin saltwater lakes within the National Park. Paddling here is like slipping into a dream. Glassy waters reflect the encircling pines and centuries-old Benedictine monastery and the silence is so pure, it feels sacred. For the more adventurous, excursions continue along the island's rugged coast, weaving through tranquil coves, sea caves and secret beaches accessible only by sea.

Quad / Buggy Safari

If you're a nature lover looking for an extra thrill, set off on a quad adventure through the Dubrovnik countryside. Whether you're riding just above the city on Mount Srđ or along the scenic Neretva river Ižica, you're guaranteed an unforgettable experience. It's especially exciting to drive quads through the picturesque villages of Ploče Dubrovačka or the Dubrovačka Primorje. Don't forget to stop and take in the view, particularly during sunset, when the landscapes are bathed in golden light.

Times and trip lengths vary depending on the agency, so be sure to choose one that suits your preferences. A Buggy Safari offers a wide range of possibilities, from off-road driving and visiting ancient fortresses to exploring sites significant to Dubrovnik's recent history during the Homeland War of the early 90s. You can also simply enjoy the diverse plants and animals and stunning views from Mount Srđ.

Sailing

The combination of natural beauty, cultural heritage and history draws many visitors to southern Croatia, including sailing enthusiasts. With hidden coves and crystal-clear waters, it's not uncommon to see numerous sailboats gliding through the Dubrovnik archipelago. For those who love to sail, Dubrovnik and its surrounding area, especially the islands, offer endless opportunities for exploration. Sailboats can be rented from local charter companies and then the adventure begins! Must-visit sailing destinations include the Elaphiti Islands and Brač Island.

Pet Friendly

Dubrovnik warmly welcomes its furry visitors. Pets are welcome throughout Dubrovnik, provided that owners follow local guidelines as outlined by the "Respect the City" destination management strategy. Several hotels and private accommodations are pet-friendly and many restaurants and cafes in both the city and its surroundings gladly host guests with four-legged companions. Some hotels also offer specialised amenities and activities tailored for travellers who enjoy active holidays with their pets. Adjacent to Mandrač Beach in Lapad lies the city's official dog-friendly beach.

Pets are welcome on the City Walls but are not allowed on Lokrum Island or the Dubrovnik Cable Car.

For Visitors with Limited Mobility

Dubrovnik and the surrounding region offer a welcoming and inclusive environment for all travellers, with many hotels, private accommodations, public institutions and cultural landmarks thoughtfully adapted for persons with disabilities and limited mobility. Within the historic city walls, access to public and government institutions is facilitated, ensuring that the heart of Dubrovnik remains open to all.

To further improve accessibility, a wheelchair is available for rent, allowing visitors to reach the Cathedral of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary via a ramp located at the southern entrance. The Convent of St. Claire and the Dubrovnik Cable Car are fully accessible to wheelchair users, as are several other key sites, including the Aquarium, the Museum of Modern Art Dubrovnik and the Rector's Palace. Accompanied wheelchair users can also access the Franciscan Monastery of the Friars Minor and the exhibition space within the Sponza Palace. Even a visit to the breath-taking Mljet National Park is simple and convenient for visitors in wheelchairs.

Public transportation, including boat services and city buses, has been comprehensively adapted to meet the needs of those with disabilities. In addition, a range of customized guided tours is available to ensure an enriching experience for all visitors.

Multiple sea-access chair lifts are positioned throughout Dubrovnik and the surrounding areas. Within the city, these can be found at the popular beaches of Ciparabana, Mandrac and Banjet Beach. Beyond the city, chair lifts are also installed at beaches in Veliki Zaton and on the Elaphiti Islands – Koločep, Lopud and Šipan – making the Adriatic coastline more accessible than ever.

Further afield, accessible facilities are also in place in Zupa Dubrovačka and Cavtat. In Sečuret, a chair lift is installed on the first pier, accompanied by a mobile ramp that allows wheelchair users to enter the sea with ease. The approach to the beach has been completely adapted, including the surrounding promenade and parking facilities. In Cavtat, a sea-access chair lift is located at the beach of Hotel Croatia and Remisevski Kvintarski. In nearby Korčula, numerous spots, including the charming village of Mokriat, are readily accessible by wheelchair. Škaro's Meće Beach also features a dedicated sea-access chair lift, a reserved parking space and a ramp leading directly to the lift.

LOCAL FAVOURITES

Culture & Nature

Dubrovnik

Lokrum Island

A short, 15-minute boat ride from Dubrovnik's harbour, Lokrum is a nature reserve filled with exotic botanical gardens, wild peacocks and shaded pine trails. Visitors can swim in the island's salt water lake known as the Dead Sea, explore the remains of a 12th century Benedictine monastery, or relax in quiet coves far from the city crowds. Lokrum is a true green sanctuary, perfect for a half-day escape.

Trsteno Arboretum

Just 30 kilometres southeast of Dubrovnik is one of the oldest and most beautiful botanical gardens in the region, dating back to the 15th century. Once the summer residence of the noble Gruz (Grušić) family, the estate is home to a magnificent Renaissance villa, a 30-metre-long apothecary and a collection of exotic plants from around the world. Towering plane trees, some over 300 years old, shade gravel paths that wind toward a spectacular sea-view pavilion.

Rupe Ethnographic Museum

Housed in a 16th century stone granary carved into the bedrock below the city, Rupe museum is a tribute to the ingenuity and resilience of Dubrovnik's citizens. The deep stone silos, once filled with emergency grain, remind visitors of a city always preparing for siege or scarcity. Today, the museum offers a rich cultural exhibition of traditional costumes, tools and rural crafts, preserving the textures of everyday life in the Dubrovnik region.

LOCAL FAVOURITES

Culture & Nature

Cavtat Konavle Sokol Fortress

This medieval fortress perched on a cliff offers commanding views of the Konavle valley and the mountains beyond. Recently restored, it provides a fascinating look into the region's turbulent past and its defensive strategies. Visitors can explore the ramparts, towers and archaeological finds that bring centuries of history to life. Its location makes it a perfect spot for photography and reflection.

Bukovac House

In a quiet street above Cavtat's waterfront, Bukovac House is the birthplace of painter Vlaho Bukovac (1873-1924), the founder of modern Croatian art. The restored stone house now serves as a museum dedicated to his life and work. Inside, visitors can see paintings from different periods of his career alongside personal objects and remarkable murals created by the artist as a teenager. A captivating place to discover the story of one of Croatia's most influential artists.

Župa Dubrovačka

Parish Church of St. Hilary

Standing in the heart of Župa Dubrovačka, this church reflects centuries of local faith and craftsmanship. Its simple yet elegant design invites quiet contemplation. Cultural events and festivals often take place here, connecting visitors with the community's traditions. It's a reminder of Župa's deep-rooted heritage.

Natural Springs at Mlini

The village of Mlini takes its name from the mills once powered by these fresh-water springs, which still bubble up beside shaded stone walkways. It's a place where nature and heritage come together, a cooling refuge on a summer's day. The sound of running water and chirping cicadas offers a soothing soundtrack as you explore the charming old bridges and restored mill houses. A quiet treasure tucked away from the crowds.

LOCAL FAVOURITES

Culture & Nature

Dubrovačko Primorje

Rector's Palace in Slano

This elegant 15th century palace was once the residence of the Dubrovnik Republic's local governor. Today, it stands as a quiet symbol of Renaissance refinement on the Adriatic coast. Its arched loggia and peaceful courtyard are beautifully preserved, offering insight into the region's political and architectural past. A treasure for history lovers exploring beyond Dubrovnik's city walls.

Heritage House

Located in the coastal village of Slano, just a short drive from Dubrovnik, the Heritage House of Dubrovačko Primorje offers a glimpse into the traditions and maritime heritage of the region. Set inside a restored historic Parish Church building (now damaged during the 1990s war), the centre today combines museum exhibitions with a lively cultural space. Visitors can explore displays of early Christian artefacts, traditional costumes and model ships (the reflect centuries of local life).

Mljet

Island

Mljet National Park

This protected area covers the western part of the island and is famous for its two saltwater lakes, the Great and Small Lakes. Visitors can cycle or hike around the lakes, kayak across these calm waters, or take a boat to the isle of St. Mary with its 12th-century Benedictine monastery. The park's landscapes, with their pine forests and turquoise waters, are among the most beautiful in Croatia. Every visit feels like stepping into a peaceful, untouched paradise.

Odysseus' Cave

Known locally as "Jama," this cave is one of Mljet's most enchanting and legendary attractions. A striking oval-shaped sea cave, carved by centuries of waves and wind, shimmers with ever-changing shades of blue as sunlight sparkles across the water. According to ancient myth, this was the very spot where the Greek hero Odysseus was shipwrecked and held captive by the beautiful nymph Calypso, unable to finish the island's spellbinding journey.
